

Abstract:

This presentation will quickly introduce the general field of philosophy of computing to the audience and position it within existing academic structures. I will then focus on my own area of research, ICT ethics. After briefly outlining the major areas of activity within ICT ethics, I shall illustrate my focus and methodology by quickly summarising my paper which developed criteria of justice in cyberspace, published in the Journal of Philosophy & Technology last year. Finally I shall outline my plans for my PhD research, which is in its earliest stages.
